A successful field crops Extension program relies on the educational skills of the educator but is supported and sustained by a practical field research program that addresses crop management questions important to farmers’ economic bottom line.