An expanding agricultural research method toolbox: Applied research methods in international development

International agricultural development implementors’ need for cyclical applied research in complex environments has given rise to a portfolio of research methods that are not typically found in an agricultural researchers toolbox. This seminar will examine international development studies that utilize these atypical research methods, including network analysis and outcome harvest.